

15th August 2008

Dear Mark Reid,

I would just like to pass on my thanks for the opportunity to take part in the first netwalking event. I believe the concept is extremely useful and should be adopted by all, regardless of size, industry or years in business.

I found the day useful in creating new business leads, building strong relationships and exploring new business ideas, all with the added bonus of enjoying the freedom and space of the Yorkshire Dales.

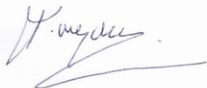

The walking wasn't too fast or demanding, but simply allowed time and freedom to enjoy the surroundings of the Yorkshire Dales. Your guidance added an extra dimension to the walk, ensuring that landmarks and historical relics were not missed.

The netwalking day allowed me time and space to reflect on my own business, and take on the advice others had to share, all in a relaxing environment. I met many interesting people whilst out on the walk and we had the time to build up a good relationship and explore new ideas without being rushed or having any of the normal pressures of day to day business.

Since the netwalking day I have been exploring new business opportunities that were made possible through the event. As a direct result, new business and new ideas have been generated leaving me in no mind that this, if you excuse the pun was a very useful exercise.

I look forward to seeing you on future events and I would thoroughly recommend all to participate.

Kind regards

Thomas Wycks
TW Podcasts LLP